III. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

One of the most remarkable aspects of Thomas Wolfe's writing style is his ability to create vivid and evocative imagery. His novels are replete with intricate descriptions that transport readers into the very scenes he portrays. Through his adept use of sensory language, the author enables readers to fully experience the sights, sounds, and aromas of the depicted settings, immersing them in the narrative. A notable instance of this artistic prowess can be found in the novel "You Can't Go Home Again", where the author effectively achieves this intention through the voice of the protagonist, George Webber. For instance, Webber exclaims, "How fine it is, here in America, at ink-fresh, coffee-fragrant morning, to read the paper!" (<http://gutenberg.net.au/ebooks07/0700231h.html>), this brief excerpt not only conveys the protagonist's personal perspective but also offers insight into American traditions and values.

Undoubtedly, "You Can't Go Home Again" stands out as Thomas Wolfe's monumental final work, drawing attention with its sheer size (Sadullaev, 2022, p. 149). The novel incorporates the chapters as "The Native's Return", "The World that Jack Built", "An End and a Beginning", "The Quest of the Fair Medusa", "Exile and Discovery", "I Have a Thing to Tell You", "A Wind is Rising, and the Rivers Flow". Within these chapters, the author delves into themes of self-awareness and the pursuit of meaning, drawing extensively from his own experiences as a writer navigating the intricate landscape of the literary world. This highlights another noteworthy aspect of his writing style—the significant role played by autobiographical elements.

Thomas Wolfe's writing style is renowned for its lyrical beauty, demonstrated through his masterful use of poetic language and rhythmic expressions. His prose resonates like a symphony, with a melodic flow and meticulously crafted sentences. This lyrical quality enhances the emotional and aesthetic impact of his works, inviting readers to forge a profound connection with the characters and explore the underlying themes within his novels. Through the enchanting power of lyrical prose, the author creates a reading experience that transcends mere storytelling, immersing readers in a world where language itself becomes a vehicle for heightened emotions and artistic expression.

"How we do love the paper in America! How we do love the paper, all! Why do we love the paper in America? Why do we love the paper, all? Mad masters, I will tell ye why. Because the paper is "the news" here in America, and we love the smell of news. We love the smell of news that's "fit to print" (<http://gutenberg.net.au/ebooks07/0700231h.html>). When Thomas Wolfe refers to the newspaper, he encompasses not only the literal printed publication but also the broader concept of news itself. In his perspective, news represents the dynamic changes occurring within society, reflecting the evolving cultural landscape. The author recognizes the profound significance of reading and the role it plays in the spiritual and cultural fabric of a nation. He perceives the act of engaging with news as an incomparable avenue through which individuals can attain a heightened level of awareness, understanding, and connection to the world around them. By delving into the news, readers are exposed to the pulse of society and gain valuable insights into its diverse facets, contributing to their overall spiritual and cultural enrichment.

In conclusion, Thomas Wolfe's novels leave an indelible impression on readers, thanks to his unique and captivating writing style. With his ability to paint vivid imagery and employ lyrical prose, Wolfe creates a literary experience that resonates deeply with audiences. The incorporation of autobiographical elements adds a personal touch to his works, allowing
